Guthrie, O. T., April M.-Hon, G. C. Clemens, the noted Kansas agitator, has come and gone, leaving behind him pleasant recollections of a highly interesting personality-for no matter how divergent opinions may be as to his political views, every one after personal encounter agrees that Mr. Clemens is a most charming figure. His present visit to Oklahoma is to inculcate the doctrines of spelalism, which he regards as the true, scientific remedy for all the ills to which the body politic is subject. Being a Kansan, Mr. Clemens naturally came in contact with a large number (old-time friends and acquaintances, and incidentally, the newspaper men who make Guthrie headquarters. To the latter he was delightfully frank, expressing his views fully on every question pro-pounded. For instance, when asked regarding the trust question, he said:

"Mr. McKinley's industrial commissi sounds a keynate for the Republicans as to dealing with trusts. The great remed proposed is to require a trust, when shipping goods to another state, to brand them as trust-made goods. Mr. Bryan's great remedy is to compel trusts in register and get Meense; before doing busiincity recognize the legal status of truess and to have truess made legal by it. If it gets the job it is certain to find a door-keeper on duty who will repudiate a door-keeper on duty who will repudiate anti-trusi' campaign, sught it not?

"Make the trust register before it gets e room in the States hotel," commented plan; "Then if it does not be good its neighbors will talk about it when it gets home. I am not a Nero and am unwilling to adopt such cruelly drastic measeven toward a trust."

Mr. Ciemens expresses his method of Enndling the trust question, in the following parable: "A torrent is rushing down the mountain and threatening with devastation our little villages in the val-It has come to stay We consult what to do to save our village. "The conditions of the Indians on the exervation referred to above are worse than they have been for years. The causes for this can easily be traced. Formerly the Indian was given a weekly ssue of rations, which consisted of meat, coffee, flour an dother necessary articles Masue of beef alone which will last them more than one week. In addition to this issue of their cash payments has been dedlalyed. The payment that should have been made in December was delayed until the latter part of February. the payment was nt made at the regular time the Indians were told that they wouldt receive a larger payment when it was made. The merchants were also led to believe that this would be done and consequently more credit was asked and given at the stores. When pay day came they were paid $30 instead of $50 or $99 as had been expected. As a result they could! not pay their debts. Many of them pand out their last cent on their debts leaving themselves with nothing to live upon. The merchants who had been doing a credit business with the Indians were caught in a bad place and some of them failed as a result. He had camped for the night about nine miles east of town near the residences of F. Kesner and C. Swain. In the night one of his horses got loose and Mr. Tomlin got up to catch him. He caught the horse and tied him to the wagon, but the exertion had been too much for him. He climbed back into the wagon end, sat down on the spring seat, striking a match in order to see what time it was, remarking to his wife that it was 1:25. He then fell back into his wife's arms and expired. Mrs. Tomlin tried to revive him by throwing cold water in his face, but her efforts were useless. She then went to the house of F. Kenser, but falled to arouse them. She then went to the house of a colored man named Rogers, who returned with her to the wagon. Rogers suggested that she calf up Ragan.
